1)BACKGROUND

In December 2019, the African Peer Review Mechanism (APRM) received financing from the Swedish International Developed Agency (SIDA) and intends apply part of the grant as payment towards the procurement of an experienced individual consultant to draft an APRM Civil Society Handbook. The handbook will provide guidelines for Civil Society organizations, development partners, strategic partners and organisations with memorandum of understanding (MOU) in familiarising and understanding their institutions roles and functions in the APRM process. Moreover, the handbook will be aimed at upscaling meaningful civil society participation.

2)DESCRIPTION OF THE PROJECT

The African Peer Review Mechanism was established in 2003 by the African Union Heads of State and Government with the primary purpose of fostering practices that lead to political stability, high economic growth, sustainable and inclusive development, as well as accelerated regional and continental integration. It seeks to rectify underlying deficiencies in governance and socioeconomic development processes among member states of the African Union. The APRM covers four thematic areas: (i) Democracy and political governance; (ii) Economic management and governance; (iii) Corporate governance; and (iv) Socio-economic development. Participating countries go through detailed review processes (including consultations with government, the private sector, civil society and other stakeholders), culminating in a peer review exercise at the level of Heads of State and Government.

A key feature of the APRM is that it is home grown. This, as well as its voluntary nature, are important in buttressing and consolidating Africa's ownership of its development agenda. As an assessment and monitoring tool, the APRM can also help to track progress towards meeting regional and international development aspirations and commitments including the AU's Agenda 2063 and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The African Union and the Heads of State are cognizant of this and in January 2017, they expanded the mandate of the Mechanism from the core reviews to monitoring and evaluation role, for the African Union Agenda 2063 and the SDGs. This is a reflection of the confidence reposed in the Mechanism and will contribute to the universalization of the APRM where all AU member states will become members of the APRM.

To date, over a period of 17 years, the APRM has conducted 23 Country Review Missions across the African continent covering extensive analysis of standards of governance in the four thematic areas, i.e. democracy and political governance, economic management and governance, corporate governance; and socio-economic development.

Civil society organisations are key stakeholders in the APRM process. The APRM founding documents and APRM Statute recognise civil society as an integral members of Member States National Governing Councils (NGCs). Since the founding of the APRM in 2003, civil society organisations have lamented on their lack of access and participation in the APRM process. In most cases Civil Society participates in the APRM process during country reviews however the momentum in most cases slows after the country review. It is important to note that the APRM process entails way more than the country reviews. Civil Society has the role of following up APRM recommendations in improving governance. It is against this backdrop that the APRM has decided to develop a handbook that will provide an overview of how they participate. The handbook expected explain the internal AU protocols that might not necessarily be understood by Civil Society organisations when participating in the APRM process.
