2)INTRODUCTION

The African Peer Review Mechanism (APRM), is a specialised agency of the African Union and the continent's pioneer self-monitoring tool for promoting good governance. Launched in 2003, the Mechanism is a voluntary exercise that offers African states the opportunity to systematically assess and review their governance performance. The Mechanism also provides a platform for sharing replicable successful practices and enhancing the adoption and implementation policies, standards and codes. The APRM currently has a membership of 39 states and its Continental Secretariat is located at No. 230 15th Road, Randjespark, Midrand South Africa.

3)MANDATE OF APRM

The APRM promotes and facilitates self-monitoring among participating member states to ensure that their policies and practices conform to the agreed political, economic, corporate governance and socio-economic values, codes and standards contained in the Declaration on Democracy, Political, Economic and Corporate Governance; and the African Charter on Democracy, Elections and Governance as well as other relevant treaties, conventions and instruments adopted by Participating States whether through the African Union or through other international platforms.

In the implementation of its mandate, the APRM primarily seeks to foster the adoption of policies, standards and practices that lead to political stability, high economic growth, sustainable and inclusive development, as well as accelerated regional and continental economic integration
